ACTON, Mass. – Christopher Hickey, Executive Director, Institute for Sport Coaching, has joined the new Up2Us sports-based youth development coalition to assist in the development of Up2Us training initiatives. “We are very pleased to have such an innovative leader in sport coaching education such as Chris become part of the Up2Us movement. Chris will play a vital role in ensuring Up2Us programs meet the standards for recruiting and training youth sport coaches,” stated Paul Caccamo, Up2Us Executive Director.

Up2Us was formed in January 2008 and now has more than 150 youth development organizations that serve at-risk youth, linked together to create a national umbrella organization whose purpose is to increase the size and scope of sports programs that fight childhood obesity. Up2Us is leveraging resources to engage millions of children in organized athletic programs that promote health, nutrition and fitness, as well as other youth development outcomes. The initiative will also call on all Americans young and old to volunteer as coaches and assistant coaches at nearby schools and community centers where children desperately need adult volunteers to inspire healthier lifestyles.

Hickey, also a board member of the National Coalition for Accreditation of Coaching Education (NCACE), is a leader in sport coaching education and has led the Institute since its inception in 2003.
